In response to the detection that a mode change is required, selecting a mode for resource allocation, wherein the mode is selected based on a received command or the mode is selected from a plurality of modes which comprises a first mode and a second mode, and wherein in the first mode the cellular communication and device to device communication are separated in time, and in the second mode the cellular communication and device to device communication take place simultaneously.

FIG.7